Flash flooding forces evacuations

About 35 moved from homes; 60 structures damaged

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Heavy rainfall late Friday night into early Saturday morning poured enough water on the Madison area to unleash a flash flood that forced the evacuation of about 35 residents in downtown Madison — some by boat — and left about 60 structures damaged along with streets and a bridge.

The bulk of the thunderstorm hit between 11 p.m. and 1 a.m. and dumped 4 inches of rainfall over a short enough period of time that creeks and storm sewers were quickly overwhelmed. A torrent of water shot down off nearby hillsides and even more left the banks of Crooked Creek, flooding the North Walnut neighborhood in downtown Madison.

Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency Director Troy Morgan said the heavy rainfall was widespread and when all that water hit downtown Madison it had to find someplace to go and that ended up being homes and businesses to the east and west of Crooked Creek.

Pursuit leads to resisting, drug charges in Madison

Carroll man facing multiple counts

BY THE COURIER STAFF

A pursuit in downtown Madison led to the arrest of a Madison man for resisting law enforcement and on drug charges Friday afternoon.

Benjamin Weary

Steven Hanlon

Benjamin Andrew Moses Weary, 39, Madison, was arrested by Madison City Police, for Possession of Methamphetamine and Resisting Law Enforcement, both Level 6 felonies; and possession of paraphernalia, a misdemeanor.

The pursuit began when MPD Patrolman Cameron Blankenship attempted to stop a vehicle traveling east on Third Street for not properly signaling a turn. However, the driver continued on, turning north on Walnut Street, then east on Fourth Street and north onto Saddle Tree Lane before cutting through an alley and turning south on Gerry Lane to U.S. 421. The pursuit finally ended when Weary pulled over and stopped his vehicle on U.S. 421.

Officer Brian Ashcraft and K9 Colt arrived on the scene, and the drug dog detected a small amount of methamphetamine.

Weary was lodged in the Jefferson County Jail without bond.

Elsewhere, an arrest warrant and subsequent search led to the incarceration of a Carroll County man and the recovery of methamphetamine and cash Sunday in Carrollton, Kentucky.

Sheriff's Deputy Brandon Meredith executed the arrest warrant on Steven Hanlon, 38, Carrollton, on Sunday afternoon, and during a search 4.5 ounces of methamphetamine and $1,600 in cash were recovered. Hanlon was charged with trafficking in methamphetamine in addition to the outstanding charges on the warrant which included trafficking in a controlled substance, possession of a controlled substance, possession of marijuana, buying/possessing drug paraphernalia, tampering with physical evidence, contempt of court libel/slander, and leaving scene of accident-failure to render aid or assistance.

Carroll County Sheriff Ryan Gosser said drug enforcement has been an emphasis of Carroll County law enforcement "since day one" and there have been more than 540 suspects charged on drug arrests over the last 2 1/2 years.

He praised his officers for doing "an excellent job locating and getting arrested" those involved with illegal drugs.

FLOODING

By 1 a.m. Madison Fire Department was responding to areas of North Walnut, Moody Park, Saddle Tree Lane and Spring Street on reports of flooding in the roadway.

The first firefighters arriving on scene found water not only covering the roadway, but nearly 5 feet deep in some places as well as flooding in numerous homes and businesses. At the same time, the Jefferson County Central Dispatch started receiving multiple reports of residents in need of assistance in evacuating as well as accidents caused by power outages related to the storm.

"Most of the people we've talked to said it happened within like a minute," Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said. "They had very little warning before the flood hit and just like that it was over and gone. It was only four or five minutes until the water was gone.

"It was a triple threat of situations," Courtney added. "We had the flash flooding, then the power outages and then the traffic accidents due to the number of traffic control devices that were out. It became very busy."

Madison called out its water rescue resources and then called on those from Milton Fire & Rescue in Trimble County and Jeff-Craig Fire Department in Switzerland County to assist with evacuations by boat. The multiple requests for assistance were prioritized for response by the information that was received and medical priorities and children were given the highest rank to receive help.

Neighbors on North Walnut and other streets — most veterans of previous flooding — also pitched in to help each other where they could.

"We would like to thank the Walnut Street residents who assisted with finding and helping their fellow residents," Madison Fire Chief Bill DeVries said.

The Salvation Army opened its shelter Saturday morning to assist those displaced by the flooding, the American Red Cross set up disaster assistance stations there as well and the Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency began disaster assessments Saturday and was still working to complete that report on Monday.

Courtney said while about 35 people were evacuated, apparently nobody was injured but about a dozen were left seeking shelter as the flood damage was "severe" in some sections of the neighborhood.

"The damage was very severe to both structures and content," the mayor said. "I have called a localized disaster emergency so that we can apply for resources to assist with the cleanup and damage and issued a travel watch to close several streets to assist with cleanup and prevent anything like looting."

Morgan said on Monday that about 60 structures were hit by the flooding — some worse than others — including at least 56 residences and at least four businesses. He also noted that the City of Madison's Milton Street Bridge over Crooked Creek was damaged and that street remains closed between Jefferson and Mulberry streets.

Courtney activated all city departments to assist those in need and said while Madison City Hall would remain closed Monday in observance of the new federal holiday for Juneteenth Day, staff would report for work to answer phones and assist anyone in need of services related to the emergency. Madison's waste transfer station was already scheduled to remain open on Monday but Courtney said free disposal would be allowed for any flood debris brought to the facility.

North Walnut and its nearby streets are prone to flooding and evacuations have taken place there in the past but Courtney said Saturday morning's storm was unlike those seen in recent years.

"This was not like the storm in 2015 or others we've had recently," Courtney said. "Those were caused by extended rainfall and blockages. The creeks and storm sewers were open this time but the amount of water was overwhelming. The water came up really quick and went back down in a matter of minutes. It had a place to go this time but there was just too much at one time."

Patrick Thevenow, a member of Madison City Council and a property owner in the area, was cleaning up at his rental house in the 300 block of Fifth Street late Saturday morning.

"I was in Louisville and my sister, Julie, called me at 3 a.m. and said there was flooding on Walnut," Thevenow said. "For her to call me at 3 a.m. I knew it had to be something bad so I headed home."

Thevenow was trying to wash down mud with a garden hose as a line of flood-damaged furniture and other items that had been carried out of the home for disposal sat nearby on the sidewalk. Remnants of the high water were clearly visible on the sides of homes and vehicles.

"It's happened here before," Thevenow said. "What we've got to do is figure out why it is happening and where it is coming from."

Madison Police and Jefferson County Sheriff Deputies were stopping traffic from entering the impacted areas while Madison Street Department crews worked to clear mud and debris as the cleanup was already well underway by Saturday afternoon.

Tony Sorrell, the city's street supervisor who was on hand to oversee the operation, walked by at a brisk pace going from one job to the next.

"You don't even want to know what I'm thinking," he said, shaking his head at the destruction but never breaking stride.

Just across US 421 — Jefferson Street in Madison — a massive operation was underway at the Miss Madison Racing boat shop at Milton and Mulberry streets. The shop, which sits just above Crooked Creek in downtown Madison, was hard hit by the flooding when a garage door on the building was struck by debris, allowing flood waters to rush through the structure.

Luckily, the team's two hydroplanes and much of the equipment for the upcoming H1 Unlimited season, was at a second team shop out west or en route to next weekend's season opener at Guntersville, Alabama. But a lot of equipment — engine parts, tools, records and other valuable resources — were in the shop and some was damaged. Team members and volunteers were clearing and cleaning equipment at the shop on Saturday (Additional coverage on Page B1).

One of the most valuable items in the shop that was caught up in the flooding but undamaged by the water, mud and debris was the APBA Gold Cup trophy that Miss Madison Racing won as Miss HomeStreet at Madison in 2019 and will defend here on July 4 at the Madison Regatta. The 117-year-old trophy — the most prestigious in the sport — was sitting on the shop floor in its protective case for safe storage.

"That's the first thing I did when I got here is to see if the Gold Cup was OK," said Regatta member Roger Snell. "It went under water but it was sealed inside the case. It's OK. There was no damage."

About an hour later more rain moved into the area but other than soaking those working in the cleanup, the light rain was probably a blessing.

"The damage is already done," Courtney said. "This little amount of rain might actually help with the cleanup by washing away some of the mud."

At the height of the emergency, about 4,300 customers in Jefferson County lost power — about 1,000 of those in Madison — but that number had been reduced to about 2,600 by Saturday afternoon and was down to 88 by the next morning. But for those hit worst by the flooding, having power restored was of little value in homes with wet wiring.

Other areas of Madison and Jefferson County were also hit by the heavy rainfall as creeks and streams swelled and roads and parking lots became inundated. Several grave markers and tombstones were knocked over by rushing water at St. Joseph's Cemetery located at the north end of North Walnut Street just above Cooked Creek.

The rainfall also impacted areas like Friendship, Indiana, where a National Muzzle Loading Rifle Association shoot and flea market was set to wrap up Sunday.

"As with much of the area, we have seen several inches of rain over the last 24 hours," the Friendship Volunteer Fire Department posted late Saturday morning. "Laughery Creek is out of its banks and is continuing to rise rapidly. Currently SR 62 is under water between Friendship Flea Market and town. Many of the county roads have water over them as well. The road is not passable and there are many working to gather and depart. Will post further updates however plan on conditions to worsen before they improve as the water from the north comes through the valley. Remember, your safety is most important! So please turn around and don't drown!"

Public welcome to attend to annual amateur radio field day

BY SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

The public is invited to participate in the amateur radio field day and potentially communicate with other amateur radio operators around the country and world during the annual Amateur Radio Relay League Field Day.

The Clifty Amateur Radio Society, the Ivy Tech Community College Amateur Radio Club, and the Royal Rangers Amateur Radio Club will participate in the Amateur Radio Relay League (ARRL) Field Day event from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday, June 26.

ARRL Field Day is a nationwide exercise that tests amateur radio operators' equipment and their ability to operate under adverse conditions such as those that may occur during a disaster.

Amateur radio is recognized as one of the only viable communication means that would be available after a large-scale disaster.

Saturday's exercise involves amateur radio operators throughout the U.S. and Canada who set up temporary stations, many using emergency power from generators, batteries, or solar power.

From these temporary stations, they try to contact as many other stations as possible around the U.S. and Canada and in other countries as well.

There are more than 750,000 amateur radio licensees in the US and about 3 million operators around the world.

The Jefferson County group will be setting up their radio equipment and operating from the West parking lot on the campus of Ivy Tech Community College, 590 Ivy Tech Drive, Madison, Indiana.

More than 35,000 amateur radio operators across the country are expected to participated in this year's event.

For more information on the Field Day event or on becoming a licensed Amateur Radio Operator, contact Jerry Barnes at wbarnes@ivytech.edu or 812-569-8925.

Buying housing from a bestie

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: A year ago, my best friend, "Tia," got her real estate license, and she has been working very hard to build her clientele. She has succeeded in selling two homes and being the buyer's agent for three.

My husband and I want to buy a home soon, and I'm conflicted on whether to hire her as our agent. She's a wonderful friend.

On the one hand, I want to do everything I can to support my friend in her new career. I think she has excellent qualities and would do a good job for us. I also worry that she would be hurt if we didn't choose her.

On the other hand, my husband is nervous about her lack of experience, and I worry if we disagreed in this transaction, it would affect our friendship negatively.

What do you think I should do? — Mixing Friends with Business

Dear Mixing Friends with Business: Since Tia is a wonderful friend, and you've been through thick and thin together, take her to lunch and walk her through the situation. Explain your friendship is more important to you than a single house purchase. Tell her of your husband's concerns.

Then, you can propose one of two options: You and your husband can hire someone else, or she can team up with an experienced real estate agent and you and your husband can work with two agents in buying your house. Having someone you can trust who is representing you is helpful, and having someone with vast experience is worth gold.

Dear Annie: I need to put this out there, even if I'm overreacting and it is not my place. Recently, friends divorced, and some members of my family took different sides. Specifically, I became the ear for the wife to vent to when things got rough, while my sister-in-law, "Rebecca," became the ear for the husband, "Sam".

I tried to stay out of the details and just offer encouragement during the rough patch of my friend's life. However, details of Sam's stepping out with other girls came to light.

Rebecca does not think Sam did anything wrong because he said that when he met with these girls, nothing physical ever happened. Rebecca and Sam are constantly hanging out together, and she has killed whatever friendship she had with the wife.

The divorce has been finalized, and there is still tension among all parties involved. Recently, I've noticed Rebecca has taken a much more active role in her friendship with Sam. I would not care if Rebecca and Sam got together if it weren't for the fact that she is married with four kids. She has been constantly texting him while ignoring her own family, despite being told repeatedly her close relationship with Sam has been raising questions about whether she is cheating on her husband.

Rebecca has complained about her husband working long hours, but the moment he had a day off, she left him at home with their kids so she could go to a local date spot with Sam. Thankfully, there was an additional guy friend there. My worry is that she is going to be in the same spot as our friends were recently because her husband will think it was too much. Her husband doesn't like Sam either. If a fight or divorce is on the horizon, she will still be part of our family because she is my husband's sister.

Is there anything I can do or say, or am I sticking my nose somewhere it shouldn't belong? — Concerned and Worried Sister

Dear Concerned: Rebecca is playing with fire, flirting with Sam and ignoring her husband. Since Rebecca is your husband's sister, you might ask him to talk to her for the sake of the four kids, if nothing else.

A thank-you to fathers

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear readers: Your responses about valuable traits you learned from your fathers were truly inspiring. Here are a few more of my favorites.

Dear Annie: My father instilled in me two thoughts that I hold onto every day. I have passed these on to my grandchildren.

No. 1: You only have one chance to make a good first impression when meeting someone. Look them in the eye; give them a firm handshake; and say their name.

No. 2: You will go through life meeting and knowing lots of people. Some will be smarter than you; some will be better-looking than you; some will have an easier way of doing things than you. But I don't want to ever hear anyone saying they are more honest than you. — Victor P.

Dear Annie: When I was in the fifth grade (way back in the late '80s), I was taking music lessons at school. My grandparents weren't able to come to the concert, so when we visited them eight hours away, they wanted to hear my sister and me play our clarinets. I had an extreme case of stage fright and couldn't play in front of them. My grandfather came to me and said: "You can do anything if you try. You just need to take smaller steps." He then set up my music stand in the hallway so that nobody could see me and I couldn't see them. I was able to perform! Soon, I was able to come out from behind the wall and perform in front of them. Now when anything feels too overwhelming, I always think of him and his advice: "Take smaller steps." — Joe S.

Dear Annie: My dad was a farmer. His priorities were faith, family and friends. He treated our mom with love and respect, always had time for us (his 11 children) and had many, many friends in the community. Daily prayer was one of his most valuable traits. — Guy C.

Dear Annie: Mine was a father who said: "I will teach you my values. I will advise you on the potential consequences of your choices, but I will not tell you what to do." Here are several of those values that my father gave me that have guided my life and for which I have been sincerely grateful.

No. 1: "When you choose your behavior, you choose the consequences of that behavior."

No. 2: "If you have to cheat to win, you lose much more than you won."

No. 3: "If you have to put someone down in an effort to make yourself look better, you fail at both." — Francis D.

Dear Annie: The most valuable trait that I inherited from my dad was by far his work ethic. The man went from not having a high school education to being vice president and lobbyist for a major corporation. He started out delivering pharmaceuticals on a motorcycle as a teen, and when my older sister and I were born, he was collecting coins from pay telephones for the telephone company. He was a firm believer that you and only you had to go after whatever you wanted out of life. You may win; you may lose. Not everyone would get the trophy. In the end, fail or succeed (though failing was never a good option), you had the feeling you gave it your best and came out a wiser person for your effort. I am retired now. My work accomplishments have paralleled his, and I owe my success and my work ethic to my dad. — Florida Kid with a Great Dad

Ohio-based MAB locating in Walton

BY SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Gov. Andy Beshear last week announced that MAB Fabrication Inc., will locate a new production operation in Walton, Kentucky, creating 24 full-time jobs in the coming months with a $6.9 million investment.

MAB Fabrication continues the trend of metals and manufacturing companies creating jobs in Kentucky as our economy roars back from this pandemic, Beshear said. This company is a welcome addition to the Northern Kentucky business community, and I hope to see its presence grow in our state for years to come. Thank you to the leaders of MAB for this commitment to the workforce in Boone County and the surrounding region. This new location again shows how Team Kentucky is creating a better future for Kentuckians throughout the commonwealth.

MAB leaders plan to locate in an existing 165,000-square-foot facility on Beaver Road in Walton. The project comes with MAB's continued growth as the company looks to increase its manufacturing footprint and better serve customers throughout the U.S.

We are looking forward to our move to Walton, said Tim Bischel, president of MAB Fabrication. The relocation and new facility will allow us to meet our growth goals. Walton is located just off on I-71 about 40 miles north of Carrollton, Kentucky.

Founded in 2014 and headquartered in Harrison, Ohio, MAB is a custom steel fabricator that manufactures awnings for greenhouses, garden centers and big-box stores, among other establishments.

Last week, Gov. Beshear announced Kentucky's metals industry in 2021 alone has contributed to $870 million in new investment and over 1,500 jobs for Kentucky residents. Currently, the commonwealth is home to over 230 metals-related facilities that employ approximately 25,000 Kentuckians.

MAB Fabrications investment and planned job creation continues a recent wave of economic momentum in the commonwealth as the state builds back stronger following the effects of the pandemic.

Last month, Moody's Analytics published a positive economic outlook for Kentucky, noting mass vaccination as the driving force behind a sustained recovery in consumer services. The states recovery, Moody's said, benefited from earlier reopening efforts and increased demand for manufactured goods over services. The report also found Kentucky's manufacturing industry outperformed the nations since the national downturn last year.

Fitch Ratings last month improved the states financial outlook to stable, reflecting the commonwealths solid economic recovery. The states April sales tax receipts set an all-time monthly record at $486.5 million, as did vehicle usage tax receipts at over $64 million.

In March, Site Selection magazines annual Governors Cup rankings for 2020 positioned Kentucky atop the South Central region, and third nationally, for qualifying projects per capita. The commonwealth also placed seventh overall in total projects, the highest of any state with a population under 5 million. Site Selection also recently placed Kentucky in a tie for fifth in its 2021 Prosperity Cup rankings, positioning the state among the national leaders for business climate.

Boone County Judge/Executive Gary Moore said the county supports attracting a new manufacturing company to the region.

Boone County is pleased to welcome MAB Fabrication and the new manufacturing jobs it is bringing to the City of Walton, Judge/Executive Moore said. I congratulate Tim Bischel, president and co-founder, on the company's growth and success.

Walton Mayor Gabe Brown said he appreciates the company's decision to locate in the City of Walton.

MAB Fabrication is the type of company we want to attract to Walton, Mayor Brown said. Our community is ideally located with good highway access and a strong workforce for advanced manufacturers.

Lee Crume, president and CEO of Northern Kentucky Tri-ED, noted that the company is joining a strong manufacturing community in the region.

Were happy we were able to work with MAB Fabrication to identify a larger facility that will accommodate their growth while retaining the company and jobs in the Cincinnati region, Crume said. Manufacturing is a strong sector in Northern Kentucky, and MAB Fabrication is a complement to our existing base.

To encourage the investment and job growth in the community, the Kentucky Economic Development Finance Authority (KEDFA) in May preliminarily approved a 10-year incentive agreement with the company under the Kentucky Business Investment program. The performance-based agreement can provide up to $250,000 in tax incentives based on the company's investment of $6.9 million and annual targets of: creation and maintenance of 24 Kentucky-resident, full-time jobs across 10 years and paying an average hourly wage of $25 including benefits across those jobs.

By meeting its annual targets over the agreement term, the company can be eligible to keep a portion of the new tax revenue it generates. The company may claim eligible incentives against its income tax liability and/or wage assessments.

In addition, the company can receive resources from the Kentucky Skills Network. Through the Kentucky Skills Network, companies can receive no-cost recruitment and job placement services, reduced-cost customized training and job training incentives.

MADISON COURIER GIRLS TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETE OF THE YEAR

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Lundun Perry has accomplished so much in her high school career that it's hard to realize that she's only been running track and field two years. A newcomer to the sport as a sophomore, Perry lost her junior season to the COVID-19 pandemic and didn't truly find her groove until late in her senior season.

But what a groove it was. The Madison Consolidated High School senior won a Hoosier Hills Conference championship and reached the state finals in the 200-meter dash. She then capped her career by becoming just the eighth athlete in school history — boys or girls — to be named an Indiana Track and Field All-Star.

It was an impressive campaign for an athlete who has yet to fully tap into her vast potential as a runner.

"You don't find an athlete like this even every four or five years," Madison girls track and field coach Patrick Maschino said. "We're definitely going to miss her, not just on the track but with her personality and leadership. She was great for our team and our school. She's going to be missed."

Perry's outstanding senior season was enough to earn her this year's award as The Madison Courier's Girls Track & Field Athlete of the Year. What separated Perry from a crowded field of potential was a consistency that showed regardless of the competition she faced.

The top 100- and 200-meter sprinter in the area, Perry dashed through the competition and earned the school's final HHC title when she won the 200 at the 2021 Hoosier Hills Conference meet.

The top 100- and 200-meter sprinter in the area, Lundun Perry dashed through the competition and earned the school's final HHC title when she won the 200 at the 2021 Hoosier Hills Conference meet.

She finished runner-up in both the 100 and 200 dashes at the IHSAA Sectional and another runner-up finish in the 200 sent her to the state finals where she finished 22nd after a bobble at the start. Had she run her best time, she would have been in the top 12.

A longtime basketball player, Perry decided to give track and field a shot her sophomore year and showed her skills throughout that first season. But losing last year forced her to spend much of her senior campaign getting back up to speed.

"It felt so much better than two years ago," Perry said of her senior season. "I was good two years ago, but I just felt the improvement this year."

For Maschino, watching Perry improve and understand the sport has been one of the true joys of his coaching career. And he can't wait to see what she does next when she begins running for the University of Indianapolis this fall.

"I'm ecstatic. I am so excited because she hasn't even touched her ceiling yet," Maschino said. "That's what is so exciting for me as a coach and what I know is exciting for the coaches up at UIndy. Just what she has been able to do in a limited time — and losing that junior season is huge for an athlete — has been incredible. I was excited to see her be able to make up for all of that lost ground as a junior."

Perry showed a little of what she could do in the Midwest Meet of Champions at Olivet College in Michigan a week after the state finals.

One of the team's display boats was inside the building when it was swept through by flash flooding overnight. The force of the 3-foot-deep water moved the boat and damaged or soaked parts, tools and numerous files of team data but the team's actual race boats were untouched at its west coast shop or en route to the H1 Unlimited season opener at Guntersville, Alabama. Above right: A pile of debris left by flash flooding and equipment from the Miss Madison Racing boat shop sit on Mulberry Street as crew members Pat Furnish (left) and Holt work to clear and clean up. Furnish, Holt and other team members arrived on a flight from Seattle at 1 a.m. Saturday, ahead of next weekend's H1 season opener at Guntersville Lake in Alabama and went right to work on the cleanup.

Miss Madison team avoids 'disaster' when flash flood strikes

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

The Miss Madison Racing Team narrowly avoided disaster this weekend when a flash flood swept through the team's shop causing thousands of dollars damage to memorabilia and merchandise.

But the team's two H1 Unlimited hulls and most of the equipment were at the team's shop in Tukwilia, Washington, avoiding any possible damage from the flood.

"It would have been a disaster," Team member Trey Holt said if the racing equipment had been on site.

One of the most valuable items in the shop that was caught up in the flooding but undamaged by the water, mud and debris was the APBA Gold Cup trophy that Miss Madison Racing won as Miss HomeStreet at Madison in 2019 and will defend here on July 4 at the Madison Regatta. The 117-year-old trophy — the most prestigious in the sport — was sitting on the shop floor in its protective case for safe storage.

"That's the first thing I did when I got here is to see if the Gold Cup was OK," Regatta Race Chairman Roger Snell said. "It went under water but it was sealed inside the case. It's OK. There was no damage."

Massive rains hit the Madison area late Friday night, dumping what officials believe might have been six inches of rain in the span of three hours. That deluge caused a flash flood on Crooked Creek, which spans the northern portion of downtown Madison.

The Miss Madison shop, which is located on Milton Street at the foot of Michigan hill, sits alongside Crooked Creek and took the brunt of the water.

Padres beat Reds behind Myers, Lamet for 4-game sweep

BY BERNIE WILSON

SAN DIEGO — Playing in front of mostly full stands at Petco Park has helped restore the San Diego Padres' badly bruised swagger.

The fans are thrilled to be back in full force. The Padres, who won a wild card playoff series in their empty ballpark against St. Louis in October, are happy they're returned.

Wil Myers hit a two-run triple and scored on Joey Votto's errant throw in the third inning as the San Diego Padres beat Cincinnati 3-2 Sunday for their first four-game sweep ever against the Reds and their first four-game sweep overall since Aug. 18-21, 2011, against the Marlins.

Petco Park opened to full capacity on Thursday night, two days after the state's reopening plan went into effect. A sellout crowd of 40,362 turned out to watch a 6-4 thriller in which the Padres hit two two-run homers in the ninth. The Padres drew big crowds for the other three games.

The Padres were allowed to have limited capacity earlier in the season after no fans were allowed in during the pandemic-shortened 2020 season.

The Padres regained their stride after losing 13 of their previous 17 games. They were coming off a 1-5 trip that ended with a three-game sweep at lowly Colorado.

Reds manager David Bell said he noticed the boost the fans gave the Padres.

"They're a good team, no question," Bell said. "We're a good team, so we expect to win games here, for sure. But they played well. They're a very good team and it takes our best."

Tatis watched from the dugout as his replacement, rookie Kim Ha-seong, deftly started a double play with the bases loaded to end the seventh. Kim made several other nice plays at shortstop.

Larson romps to yet another victory for Hendrick Motorsports

BY JENNA FRYER
AP AUTO RACING WRITER

Jared C. Tilton/Getty

Kyle Larson celebrates in victory lane after winning at Nashville on Sunday, his third consecutive Cup Series win.

LEBANON, Tenn. — Kyle Larson won his fourth race in seven days then finally headed home to sleep in his own bed.

For a night, anyway.

The busiest driver in motorsports won again Sunday in the Cup debut at Nashville Superspeedway, where Larson drove to NASCAR's victory lane for the fourth consecutive week.

Sandwiched in between his $1 million victory in the All-Star race at Texas last Sunday and his Cup-leading fourth victory of the season at Nashville were two dirt racing wins in Ohio worth $6,000 each to the winner.

Next up for Larson: Brandon, South Dakota, for Monday and Tuesday night World of Outlaws races at Huset's Speedway.

"All of the racing helps for everything I do. I win a Cup race and it helps me for dirt racing," Larson said. "I think just racing a lot — I'm in racing situations more than anybody else in the world, really — but especially in Cup and I think that helps me stay sharp, it helps me be aggressive and understand what things are doing and tracks changing.

"You're just getting into a rhythm and staying in a rhythm when none of these (Cup) guys are getting back in the car until Saturday. I think it's a big advantage for me to be in a car multiple times a week."

Larson led 264 of 300 laps at Nashville for his third consecutive win in a points race, fourth straight including the All-Star race.

The Chevrolets from Hendrick Motorsports have won six consecutive weeks dating to Alex Bowman's May 16 win at Dover.

"My goodness, we don't have anything for those Chevrolets right now," said Aric Almirola, the highest-finishing non-Chevrolet driver at fourth in a Ford. He started from the pole.

Nashville Superspeedway re-opened this weekend after a decade of dormancy to host its first ever Cup race. NASCAR's top series last raced in the Nashville-area 37 years ago at the Fairgrounds, where Geoff Bodine won in the No. 5 Chevrolet for Rick Hendrick in his first season as a team owner.

Hendrick is the winningest organization in NASCAR with 271 wins. Larson gave his new boss the record 269th victory three points races ago at Charlotte.

Nashville is the 30th track a Hendrick car has won at and Larson did in his own No. 5 Chevrolet to bring Hendrick full circle on racing in Music City.

"To be here and have this many victories, to see that car back on track, it never gets old," Hendrick said. "We're happy to be here. I love this place. I love the crowd. It felt like old times. It felt like we were back years ago with the fans excited, shoulder to shoulder."

Larson celebrated with burnouts along the entire frontstretch to put on a show for the sold-out crowd of 40,000. He then collected the traditional Gibson guitar gifted to the winner.

"I think fans can appreciate me because I do it in all different types of forms of racing, not just NASCAR. You don't know what car I'm going to be in on what day of the week," Larson said. "Because I'm a little bit different than your normal race car driver, I think that's why fans so far seem to still cheer me on and like to see me winning."

But his extracurricular racing will likely come to an end in September when the playoffs begin, Hendrick said.

"I want him happy. I don't want him hurt," Hendrick said. "He just eats, sleeps and drinks racing. He wants to win every race. I think about him getting tired. But if you run 600 miles, go win another race that night, win two more races... his stamina is unbelievable. But I've never seen anybody more intense that wants to race every minute of every day, and he wants to win."

Ross Chastain finished second for Chip Ganassi Racing and Hendrick driver William Byron was third in a Chevrolet podium sweep.

Almirola and Stewart-Haas Racing teammate Kevin Harvick rounded out the top-five in one of the better days for the slumping organization.

The finishes came the same day team co-owner Tony Stewart was at his first Cup race since the start of the pandemic.

Reigning Cup champion Chase Elliott, another Hendrick driver, finished 13th but was disqualified after four loose lug nuts were found on his car in post-race inspection.

BY JIM LITKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Everyone who's played it, from the late, great Ben Hogan to the guys you get paired with down at the local muni, has probably said it at one time or another: Golf is a game of misses. It also happens to be the shortest way to explain how Jon Rahm won the U.S. Open.

Take nothing away from the 26-year-old Spaniard. Whatever shots Rahm missed didn't miss by much. His final-round 67 included only one bogey and tied the low score on the day.

Guys who've played the PGA Tour for longer than he's been alive have never made two putts in a row as delicate as the almost-identical sidewinders he cashed in for birdies on the last two holes of a major.

"I mean, I might have looked calm," Rahm said afterward. "I was not calm. I wish people could see our heart rate when we're playing in those moments because that was tense.

"But you practice to let your body basically take over, right?" he added. "That's what I did."

It's more difficult than Rahm made it sound, to be sure. Yet he generates fearsome power from one of the shortest backswings on the PGA Tour, which also makes it a lot simpler to repeat. That's why so many fellow pros tabbed Rahm as the game's next superstar not long after he joined their ranks — fewer moving parts means less to screw up coming down the pressure-packed stretch of a tough tournament like the U.S. Open.

"I don't think there's a golf course where he can't have success on," said Rory McIlory, who shot 72 and finished in a tie for seventh. "He's that good of a player. He was a major champion in waiting. It was just a matter of time."

Like a nearly a dozen other golfers, McIlroy was in the mix in the final few hours at Torrey Pines. So were Louis Oosthuizen, who shot an even-par 71 and finished second, Brooks Koepka (69, T4), Colin Morikawa (70, T4) Xander Schauffle (71, T7), Russell Henley (76, T13) Dustin Johnson (74, T19) and defending champion Bryson DeChambeau (77, T26).

By mid-afternoon, there were 10 players within two shots of the lead — hard-boiled major champions and can't-miss prospects — and then a game of musical chairs broke out. Suddenly, everybody started missing.

McIlroy three-putted the 11th, then made double bogey from a bunker at No. 12. Morikawa made double at No. 13. Koepka, who shot 32 on the front nine, came home in 37. Oosthuizen was the last player to lose his seat, hooking his tee shot on 17 into a canyon. Yet none of them flamed out like DeChambeau.

He led briefly after a tap-in birdie at the par-3 8th, then played the back nine in 44. He went bogey-bogey-double bogey at Nos. 11, 12 and 13, and just for good measure, sent a drive into the same canyon as Oosthuizen at No. 17 and shanked a chip shot farther up the fairway for quadruple-bogey there.

"I didn't get off the rails at all," said DeChambeau, who probably should avoid any replays. "It's golf. I've had plenty of times where I hit it way worse than today and I won.

"It's just one of those things," he said finally, "where I didn't have the right breaks happen at the right time."

OK. And it's probably just coincidence, too, that Rahm was the only player who didn't drop a shot on the back nine.

"I'm not going to lie," Rahm said. "I was trying not to look at the leaderboards, but the crowd was not cooperating. They were telling me exactly what was going on. So I decided to embrace it.

"You see all those great names, and to myself I thought whoever wins this one is going to be the one who won a U.S. Open with a star-packed leaderboard. I just — after I thought that, I went about my business. That was about the 10th hole," he recalled. "I knew I had to survive the next two holes and hopefully give myself a chance on the next five. I did."

That he did it as a brand-new father on Father's Day, as the first Spaniard ever to win the U.S. Open, and less than two weeks after he had to withdraw from the Memorial with a 6-shot lead after three rounds because of a positive COVID test, made his win seem almost pre-ordained.

Bird, Taurasi earn spots on fifth U.S. Olympic basketball team

BY DOUG FEINBERG
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Sue Bird and Diana Taurasi will try and become the first five-time Olympic gold medalists in basketball as they lead the U.S women's team at the Tokyo Games.

The duo was selected for their fifth Olympics on Monday, joining Teresa Edwards as the only basketball players in U.S. history to play in five. Edwards won four gold medals and a bronze in her illustrious Olympic career.

There have been five international basketball players to play in five Olympics: Spain's Juan Carlos Navarro, Brazil's Adriana Moises Pinto and Oscar Schmidt, Australia's Andrew Gaze and Puerto Rico's Teofilo Cruz.

The 40-year-old Bird and 39-year-old Taurasi will lead a veteran group in Japan, including 6-foot-6 Sylvia Fowles, who will be playing in her fourth Olympics. Tina Charles will be in her third while 6-8 Brittney Griner and Breanna Stewart are back for a second time.

There will also be six newcomers to the Olympic stage led by reigning WNBA MVP A'ja Wilson. The Las Vegas Aces star helped the U.S. win the World Championship in 2018 in Spain. Others making their Olympic debuts are Skylar Diggins-Smith, Chelsea Gray, Ariel Atkins, Jewell Loyd and Napheesa Collier.

"USA Basketball has never been in a better place," said U.S. head coach Dawn Staley, who won three Olympic gold medals as a player and helped the team win two more as an assistant coach. "I'm honored to be the coach of such an amazing collection of talented women, both those named to the team and those who gave their all the last few years but won't be with us in Tokyo."

The Americans have won the last six consecutive gold medals, not dropping a game at the Olympics since 1992. They are the heavy favorites to win again. The Americans are in a pool with France, Japan and Nigeria, which the U.S. opens up against on July 27.

The U.S. team will get together in Las Vegas in July to train for a week as well as play an All-Star Game against a selection of WNBA players. The Americans will also play games against Australia and Nigeria.

causing a hole that allowed flood waters to rush in and inundate the structure.

Holt, who had arrived from Seattle early Saturday morning to prep for this weekend's season opener in Guntersville, Alabama, said he got a call about the flood as soon as his plane landed.

"I got in about 1 a.m. and the first thing I see is a call that said the shop was flooded," Holt said. "So I rushed down."

By the time Holt arrived at the shop, the water had receded, but the damage had been done. Up to 18 inches of water had flooded the shop, leaving behind two inches of mud that coated seemingly everything. The water was so high that the Madison Regatta display boat, a former H1 Unlimited craft which is being stored in the shop, had floated several feet to the left, narrowly missing Holt's inboard boat which was also being stored in the shop.

Both boats were undamaged but the team lost virtually all of its merchandise that it had been planning on selling at both Guntersville and Madison as well as several scrapbooks from the team's Allison-engine days. Volunteers spent all day Saturday cleaning up the mud and trying to get the shop back in order, something that may take all week.

"We had about 25 people down here helping out and doing what we could," Madison Regatta board member Nate Davis said. "I think we got everything. It was a team effort."

The team's boat and hauler left the Seattle area last week and were expected to be in Madison Monday afternoon. Holt said because the bridge over Crooked Creek is closed, the team would likely park the hauler in the street while they continue the shop cleanup. The team was planning on a quick stay in Madison to load up more equipment before heading to Alabama by Wednesday.

Information for this story was also gathered by Mark Campbell.

REDS

Lamet (2-2) held the Reds to four hits in five scoreless innings, struck out a season-high seven and walked one.

Mark Melancon pitched the ninth for his 21st save, tops in the big leagues.

The Reds scored twice in the eighth against Emilio Pagan, with the runs coming on groundouts after the reliever allowed Winker's leadoff single and a double by Tyler Stephenson.

PADRES 7, REDS 5

Three innings after Tatis walked off the field after reinjuring his left shoulder, his replacement, rookie Kim Ha-seong, sent Petco Park into a frenzy when he hit a two-run home run with two outs in the eighth inning to lead the Padres to a wild 7-5 win against the Cincinnati Reds.

The wild day also included Reds star Joey Votto and manager David Bell getting ejected in a wild scene in the first inning.

Tatis extended his left arm as he landed and immediately reached for his shoulder, which he partially dislocated taking a violent swing against San Francisco on April 5.

That injury landed him on the 10-day injured list.

Votto and Bell were ejected in the first inning. Catcher Webster Rivas appealed after Votto offered at the high, outside pitch from Miguel Díaz, and third base umpire Chris Guccione confirmed Votto went around.

Votto was unhappy and began arguing, and Bell came out of the dugout and joined the argument. Bell and coaches Delino DeShields and Freddie Benavides had to keep Votto away from plate umpire Ryan Additon, who then apparently ejected both player and manager, although Bell didn't realize it at the time.

Votto had to be restrained as he continued to argue. Shortly after Votto went to the dugout, a Padres fan seated near the visiting dugout was ejected. Bell went back to the dugout and said he was getting ready to resume managing the game when he was called back out and was told by the umpires that he was ejected, too.

"I just went out to try to keep Joey in the game. That was my goal," Bell said. "I didn't get the job done there."

The Padres took a 5-2 lead when Machado hit a bases-loaded double into the left field corner with two outs in the fourth.

But the Reds tied it in the fifth, when they broke through against 28-year-old rookie Daniel Camarena after the local product had thrown two impressive innings in his big league debut.

Rookie Jonathan India and Jesse Winker opened the fifth with singles before Camarena got two outs.

Tatis was hurt diving for Naquin's RBI single, which chased Camarena. James Norwood came on and walked Tyler Stephenson before Eugenio Suárez hit a two-run single to tie it.

The Reds took a 2-0 lead against Diaz on Winker's RBI double two batters into the game and Kyle Farmer's RBI double in the second.

Jake Cronenworth hit a tying, two-run homer in the third for the Padres, his eighth.

LUNDUN

Perry was named to the Indiana All-Star team and expected to run her signature event, the 200-meter dash, at the event, but when she got there, she found out the event was full.

Organizers asked if she could run the 400 instead, a race in which she had never competed.

Perry decided to give it a shot and placed fifth with a 1:01.72, the fastest time in the event this season by any local runner.

Her time by itself would have been good for second in the sectional this year and sixth at the regional.

"It was so much fun. I made so many new friends and got to run the 400, which I have never done. I killed the time. I didn't think I'd get that time," Perry said with a smile. "Since I had competition running next to me, it was easier for me to push myself to stay with them which definitely helped. I think it is something that I will be looking forward to in college."

Perry will spend this summer working and then will head to Indianapolis in the fall where she plans to major in sports marketing and work out for the track season.

"At Indianapolis, they have coaches that know a lot more about this than I do and I can't wait to see what they have in store for Lundun," Maschino said. "I can't wait for her to show people what she can do."
